These indicate lots of talent, sound teaching and very hard work. The music department at Pomona College in California seems to be doing some very good work. Speaking of pupil recitals, a series of most imposing programs is being produced under the direction of Mr. Victor Heinze in Chicago. These formidable lists contain pretty much all the hard nuts which pianists ordinarily crack, such as the Chopin and Schumann sonatas, the Schumann fantasia in C, some of the Bach-Liszt transcriptions, and some of the largest sonatas from Beethoven. The illustrations are useful as evidence that the teacher is not afraid and that the pupils are also not without their nerve. But in point of fact such pieces are too difficult for young players to cope with successfully. They require a maturity of technique and a grade of interpretative handling which are beyond the possibilities of players...
