Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Bishop of St. David s Sermon: Preached Before the House of Lords on January 30, 1735 I exhort therefore, that first of all supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men: for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honestly. From the words of the text, as well as from divers other passages of scripture, appears the great care the christian religion has taken to promote the peace and quiet of communities. And there is a remarkable harmony in the precepts of the gospel to this purpose, some of them pointing out to us those passions and affections, which are commonly the occasions of disorders and disturbances, and cautioning us against them; others again directing us to that frame and disposition of mind, and those practices, which have a natural tendency to make communities happy. I shall begin with taking notice of some of the restraints, which our religion has laid upon us to this end.
