I remember the house where I was born, The little window where the sun came peeping in at morn. As I sit in my study-chair the old song which I used to hear in my childhood comes floating softly back to me, and I think, who is there that has no fond remembrance of the scenes of his early days? Unhappy is that man. The recollections of our early life spread flowers all along our path in our later wanderings. Early life always enriches itself by borrowing from the future in the form of rich anticipations, and then it repays the debt with interest by furnishing golden memories to sober maturity. The past feeds the future in all our growth, as in the plant branch and flower are nourished by the root. It is a peculiar hold which localities have upon our minds. Landscape pictures to which we give unstinted admiration are on all the walls of our minds. All poetry is full of this enthusiasm for places which we have learned to love. Those to which we are bound by peculiar memories gain a surpassing preciousness. Pre-eminently it is the scenes of our childhood before which we keep a lamp continually burning. Nothing can obliterate these from the mind. We may build more splendid habitations, Fill our rooms with paintings and with sculptures. But we cannot. Buy with gold the old associations Northampton has been a mother of many children, and they are everywhere eager for messages from the old home. There are hundreds, and even thousands of people scattered over the broad earth to whom the stately...
